

EVEN TIDE.

In the summer evenings,
When the wind blew low,
And the skies were radiant
With the sunset glow—
Thou and I were happy
Long, long years ago!

Love, the young and hopeful
Hovers o'er us twain,
Finds us with sad pleasure
And delicious pain—
In the summer evenings,
Wandering in the lane.

In the winter evenings,
When the wind blows roar,<
Blustering at the chimney,
Piping at the door—
Thou and I are happy
As in the days of yore.

Love still hovers o'er us,
Robed in white attire,
Drawing heavenly music
From an earthly lyre—
In the winter evenings,
Sitting by the fire.

A Lover Finds Happiness in His Disappointment.

A correspondent at a Northern watering place thus reveals how he once passionately suffered and was cured:

Down in an inner pocket of that valise there lies a perfumed little glove; years have fled since it was worn, yet the scent of the rose-leaves it once pressed to it still; you might turn each finger wrong side out and discover nothing therein, yet that little glove contains the history of a life—a two volume romance set in nonpareil solid. It is a memento of a watering place; it tells where I met my fate and a postscript in the thumb-line tells where our paths diverged. She was passionately fond of music, and your correspondent—though he hadn't thought of it before—suddenly discovered 'he had an ear, but no voice.' Subsequent events led him to believe that his ears were much longer proportionally, than his voice was loud. Well, from long meter to short meter the transition to meet her by moonlight was quite natural. In the course of one of these moonlight meetings—it was in June—I remember the months perfectly, and could tell you the day were it necessary—I gave my heart's affections and ruby ring, and a red rose, and she—gave that glove you see there and said she'd always be my friend. She is married, now, to a small lawyer in the Southern part of Illinois, and has two children and the fever and ague.

JUVENILE CURIOSITY.—"Won't you cut open a penny for me, father?" said a little girl, when she came home from school one day.

Cut open a penny! What do you want me to do that for? asked the father.

"Cause," said the little girl, our teacher says that in every penny there are four farthings, and I want to see them.

"I say Pat, are you asleep? Divil the sleep."

Then be after lending me a quarter.

I'm a sleep, be jabbers.

A cotemporary asked if we can throw any light upon kissing—We don't want to—the thing is done just as well in the dark.

A confirmed tippler was bothered how to honor his birthday. A brilliant idea struck him. He kept sober.

Many a sweetly-fashioned mouth has been disfigured and made hideous by the fiery tongue within it.

The time we live ought not to be computed by the number of years, but by the use that has been made of it.

It is quite natural that when woman reigns she should storm, and she always does.

He who marries a lady for her fine teeth, will be likely to find himself bitten.

Live within your income, ten fortunes are wasted where only one is earned.

We find self-made men very often, but self-unmade a great deal the oftener.

Cork-screws have sunk more people than cork jackets will ever keep up.

Why is a lady curling her hair like a housebreaker? Because she's turning the locks.

A Dutchman thinks "Honesty is the best policy, but it keeps a man tam poor."

"Stirring times!" said a Scotch lass when making porridge.

Said a conceited young lady,—"You men are a covet-us-set."
